Scarecrows

Lee Moor Business Park has once again been at the centre of the Rennington Scarecrow Festival. In its eighth year it continues to be a spur for fundraising (towards £5,000 this year) for the village hall and church - as well as for third party charities. Can I also remind people that Rennington Village Hall continues to be available for a range of hire purposes and is suitable for events of up to 200 people? - phone Ann Watson on 01665 577535.

The photos show the Brown family helping at the three-day scarecrow festival. Tenants also took part, with the bakery doing well and a special mention to Phil Magolan who provided fantastic entertainment with his ceramics business. Painting puffins turned into a real crowd puller and I wish Phil well with other events as the public get to experience his skill in producing painted pottery.

Heat from Lee Moor for Lee Moor

Local heat for local people! No more oil to be delivered to Lee Moor!! The first flames of renewable success have been rekindled at Lee Moor as the latest KWB TDS 150 is commissioned. See the photo.

Lee Moor is one of only two sites in the UK with the latest renewable technology. The technology is awe-inspiring and I can only recommend that you come to Lee Moor Business Park and see for yourself. In the next few months, willow a few hundred metres from the boiler will be harvested and the heat distributed around the site.

As a partner for Eenergy Ltd (<http://www.eenergy.ltd.uk/>) I am looking forward to selling heating boilers to as many people as I can. With savings in fuel costs of up to 75% the time is right in rural areas to use the assets around us in a more sustainable way.

Fresh Element

Just a mention of Fresh Element, the company five of us set up less than three years ago to sell ready prepared meals. It is now a catering company doing everything from canapés to picnics, hunt balls for 500 to seven-course dinners for 200. If you have entertaining to do don't go past Fresh Element - www.freshelement.co.uk.
